Massachusetts passes milestone legislation in decades-long

THINGS YOU NEED TO KNOW

REPUBLICAN LAWMAKER SAYS HE WILL BACK HILLARY CLINTON

IA Republican lawmaker in Congress became the first to break with the party and support Democrat Hillary Clinton for the White House on Tuesday amid signs of growing Republican unease with volatile presidential nominee Donald Trump. The break by Rep. Richard Hanna of New York followed days of uproar over Trump's criticism of the parents of a Muslim U.S. Army officer killed in the Iraq war, which has fueled a fresh round of Republican rebukes of the New York businessman. Illustrating the escalating tension between the candidate and the party, Trump pointedly thanked the primary opponent of Republican House of Representatives Speaker Paul Ryan on Monday for his "kind words" after Ryan had issued a statement saying the sacrifice of the parents, Khizr and Ghazala Khan, should be honored. REUTERS

CONSUMER SPENDING EXITS SECOND QUARTER WITH STRONG MOMENTUM

2U.S. consumer spending rose more than expected in June as households bought a range of goods and services, showing underlying strength heading into the third quarter. Despite healthy consumer spending, Tuesday's Commerce Department report showed inflation still muted. Economists say this, together with weak business spending and second quarter economic growth, could encourage a cautious Federal Reserve to keep interest rates at low levels for a while. "The continued buoyancy in consumption expenditures points to a favorable handoff to the third quarter, but the soft price pressures add to the narrative of the weakening inflationary backdrop," said Millan Mulraine, deputy chief economist at TD Securities in New York. REUTERS

NEW INSTAGRAM FEATURE MAKES CONTENT DISAPPEAR IN 24 HOURS

3Instagram, the photo-sharing app owned by Facebook, is taking aim at fast-growing messaging app Snapchat with a new feature that gives users the option to make pictures and videos to disappear automatically after 24 hours. The feature, Instagram Stories, will showcase pictures and videos uploaded by a user in a slideshow format, Instagram said in a blog post on Tuesday. Snapchat, which has more 100 million users, is known for automatically making postings disappear after 24 hours. However, the privately owned company released a feature in July called "Memories" that enables users to save and share content. REUTERS

Gov. Baker signs law banning gender discrimination in pay

Prohibition on paying women less for "comparable work" seen as a milestone by advocates for equal wages.

CHRIS CAESAR
@MetroBOS
chris.caesar@metro.us

Only days after Democrats made Hillary Clinton the first woman to win a major party's presidential nomination, Massachusetts Gov. Charlie Baker signed another milestone in gender equality.

The bill signed Monday prohibits employers from paying women less for "comparable work" within the same company. Exceptions are provided for other factors that might contribute to variations in pay, such as seniority, a "bona fide" merit system, sales or other bonus-based quotas, location, amount of travel and training or other levels of education. It takes effect July 1, 2018.

The law was approved unanimously by the House and Senate, and was supported by the Chamber of Commerce and advocates for equal pay, like the National Organization for Women.

Activists said the signing represents a culmination of 20 years of work by advocates looking to close the gender pay gap in the state.

"This bill finally recognizes that pay inequity is a problem," state Sen. Patricia Jehlen, who herself filed many similar bills throughout her legislative career, told WBUR. "It doesn't solve the problem, but it removes many barriers which we know have kept women from achieving equity."

In Massachusetts, women make an average of 82 percent of what their male counterparts do for comparable work. That's slightly higher than the national rate of

The law focuses on pay inequality. ISTOCK

79 percent.

For women of color in the Bay State, the contrast is even starker: African-American women make 67 percent, while Latinas make only 59 percent.

"The impact of those differences in wage is extraordinary," Victoria Budson, the executive director of Harvard's Women in Public Policy Program said. "In the city of Boston, nearly half of the children are in households that are headed by women ... [so] it's not just for that woman, but it's for her family, it's for her community."

Employees who believe they are victims of pay discrimination can sue their employer for lost wages, and, if successful, are entitled to an additional punitive award in an amount equal to those lost wages. Charges of employer discrimination can also be filed directly with the state attorney general's office, who may elect to take up the case on the party's behalf.

In a first-in-the-nation move, the law also bars employers from asking applicants about their wage history during the interview and salary negotiation process. Hiring managers will be able to ask past employers for such information only after a formal offer has been extended to the candidate. That provision will help all kinds of workers — not just women — secure the pay levels they deserve, Budson said.

"That kind of discrimination is like a snowball rolling downhill," said Budson, who also chairs the state's Commission on the Status of Women. "If an employee in their first job were paid less than their male counterpart in that job, and each subsequent employer asks what they made at that last job, their salary would continue to be benchmarked against that wage, which wasn't

Protections for employers

There are also protections for employers, too: Companies that make a good-faith effort to audit their own wage practices and correct inequities discovered on the payroll will be shielded from discrimination lawsuits based on these new provisions for three years.

a fair-market wage, which wasn't an equitable wage.

"What happens over time is that snowball continues to roll downhill, and the level of underpayment gets larger and larger over time — not smaller," she continued. "It's cumulative and can have an enormous impact."

The new rules also enable employees to discuss their salaries, wages and compensation with anyone that they choose, without retaliation from management.

"The most important thing is not only did something get passed, but this bill really provides enormous gains for the Massachusetts economy, for women, for businesses and for men," Budson said.

Mass. General falls to No. 3 in national ranking of hospitals

U.S. News and World report released its annual take on the country's best hospitals Tuesday, with a couple of Boston hospitals dropping down a few notches this year.

Mass. General Hospital was named third overall this year, down from first place in 2015. The hospital also made national rankings for all of the review's 16 sub-categories, earning first place for its psychiatric and ear, nose and throat departments.

It also came in second place for diabetes and endocrinology treatments and ranked fourth in cardiology, gastroenterology, neurology, ophthalmology, and pulmonology. Not bad!

Massachusetts General Hospital NICOLAUS CZARNECKI

Brigham and Women's Hospital was ranked 13th after ranking sixth last year, but came in fourth place for cancer treatments in this year's honor roll.

The magazine also ranked the top hospitals in the state, starting with Mass. General, Brigham and Women's, Baystate Medical Center in Springfield, Beth Israel Deaconess and Tufts.

One thing's for sure: Boston is a great place to be sick. CHRIS CAESAR

MBTA attempts to deal with nine-figure deficit

The MBTA says it hasn't ruled out any cost-saving measures in the face of a new $32 million drop in projected sales tax revenue this week — including layoffs.

"As we seek to close what's a $100-plus million deficit this year, everything's on the table. Seventy-five percent of our costs are wages and benefits so that's a core area of focus for us," MBTA Chief Administrator Brian Short-sleeve told reporters, according to State House News Service.

Officials who crafted next year's budget hoped that higher sales tax revenues — a portion of which are reserved for T costs by statute — would help close a roughly $80 million budget deficit and help wean the agency off of state bailouts.

"Everything's on the table. We're going department by department, particularly in the corporate departments, identifying areas where we can streamline, we can run more efficiently," Short-sleeve said.

The agency is also considering further privatization of other services, such as cash-handling, fare-machine maintenance and warehouse operations, according to the report. CHRIS CAESAR

Union: MBTA fare gates left open, giving riders free trips

The MBTA Union has stated that a dozen fare gates were left open when they were too full of cash to work properly, allowing passengers to take free rides last week.

The fare collection problem was blamed on a change in the routes of the employees tasked with driving to stations to collect the cash, the Boston Globe reported, adding that 12 of 84 fare machines were affected.

"We received notices from employees that fare gates were being left open to accommodate the amount of riders who had to be given free trips due to inoperable fare machines," James O'Brien, Boston Carmen's union president, was quoted by the Globe.

MBTA officials disputed the reason for the gates being left open, saying that full fare machines are not uncommon, WCVB reported, adding that the controversy started as transit officials have announced that they may lay off workers.

"Every day, some of [the fare vending machines] fill up," Nicholas Easley, the T's director of flexible contracting, told the Globe, also stating that there are more than 300 such machines.

MBTA acting general manager Brian Short-sleeve said the transit agency is looking to streamline its operation for added efficiency as it faces a potential $110 million deficit, the Boston Globe reported in a separate article.

Typhoon Nida shuts Hong Kong, more than 150 flights canceled

Hong Kong's first major typhoon this year brought gusts of more than 62 mph and prompted authorities to issue an amber warning, signifying heavy rain.

Typhoon Nida swept through Hong Kong on Tuesday, shutting down most of the financial hub and disrupting hundreds of flights with gale-force winds, while low-lying areas were put on flood alert.

More than 150 flights were canceled, the Airport Authority said, with Cathay Pacific and Dragonair warning that none of their flights would be operating until 2 p.m. at the earliest.

Thousands of passengers were stranded at the airport and about 325 flights are expected to be rescheduled.

The city's ferry, tram and bus services gradually resumed in the afternoon after the Hong Kong Observatory lowered the tropical cyclone warning to 3 from 8, shortly after midday.

Trading in Hong Kong Exchanges and Clearing Limited, including Shanghai-Hong Kong Stock Connect trading, and the derivatives market would be suspended for the rest of the day.

The Chinese Gold and Silver Exchange Society suspended trading on Tuesday morning.

Streets had been largely deserted and shops shuttered since Monday evening when the typhoon signal 8 was hoisted, prompting many people to leave work early.

Nida was moving inland and winds near its center had showed signs of weakening, the Hong Kong Observatory said.

metropolis of Guangzhou.

Airports in the southern part of the province, including Shenzhen and Zhuhai, canceled most flights while more than 35,000 people were evacuated, state media reported.

Last month, Typhoon Nepartak drove at least 420,000 people from their homes and caused more than $1.1 billion losses in China's Fujian province alone.

Man charged with sexually touching sleeping Virgin America passenger

A male Virgin America passenger has been criminally charged with sexually touching a sleeping female passenger on an overnight flight to Newark, New Jersey, from Los Angeles last week, federal prosecutors said on Tuesday.

Veerabhadrao Kunam, 58, of Visakhapatnam, India, was charged with one count of abusive sexual conduct aboard Flight 170 which departed on July 29, U.S. Attorney Paul Fishman in New Jersey said.

Fishman said the defendant was arrested on July 30 when his flight arrived, and was released on $50,000 bond following a Monday court appearance in Newark federal court.

Alexander Spiro, a lawyer at Brafman & Associates representing Kunam, declined to comment.

According to the complaint, Kunam was seated in an aisle seat when the victim, who was sleeping next to him in a middle seat, awoke to find his hands massaging her vaginal and buttocks areas, and the defendant rubbing his bare feet against hers.

The woman then traded seats with her male travel companion, and Kunam offered to buy him a drink and told him he wanted everyone to forget about the incident, prosecutors said.

A member of the flight crew then moved Kunam to another seat, and the defendant said he would not touch the victim again, the complaint said.

The most cringeworthy moments of 'The Bachelorette'

In a rather predictable ending to the "most dramatic season ever," "Bachelorette" Jojo Fletcher chose flaky football player Jordan Rodger as her partner for life. Sorry, #Team-Robby.

It was a lackluster ending, but the rest of the season was full of twists and surprises. Here are some of this season's finest — and most cringeworthy — moments.

Chad expands his little black book after he gets the boot

After he was eliminated, Chad posted a photo of himself locking lips with finalist Robby Hayes' ex-girlfriend and later alluded to also hooking up with contestant Grant Kemp's ex. Chad's enigmatic response didn't quell any anger: "All I can say is: They're both beautiful women."

Jordan's cheating controversy

Jordan's ex Brittany Farrar took to Instagram shortly after the season premiere to accuse the front-runner of cheating on her. Farrar wrote, "Riding the bench doesn't get in the way of a relationship, but cheating does," even tagging ABC in the biting post. Though Jordan has denied the allegations, rumors are still swirling.

DJ Wells keeps on snapping After Wells Adams'

elimination, he didn't cry into a pint of ice cream. Instead, the radio DJ turned heartbreak into gold while drunkenly Snapchatting a "Bachelorette" episode live from his couch. With witty insults and boyish charm, move over, DJ Kahled—Wells might be the best thing on Snapchat.

Zac Efron joined Tinder, but nobody swiped right

Is the world ending? Did we miss something? How can nobody swipe right for Zac Efron on Tinder? The only explanation would be that all the single ladies automatically assumed it was a fake profile because, let's be real, why would this chiseled-abbled hunk ever need to use Tinder?

Supposedly, Efron is single and searching for the perfect gal to take on a date. Unfortunately, our assumptions were right. The "Baywatch" babe told the U.K.'s The Times, "Amazingly, when I signed up for Tinder, nobody swiped me! They thought [my profile] was fake." He also concluded, "Dating is something I'll never be able to do." Sad face!

Broods takes a confident plunge forward with 'Conscious'

Georgia and Caleb Nott of New Zealand brother-sister duo Broods airily entered the synth scene with 2014's "Evergreen," landing them a spot on Ellie Goulding's Australian tour. She tapped them again this year for a string of April dates of her Delirium tour, giving them the prime face time with the States alongside their sophomore release, "Conscious," that dropped in June.

This time, with producer Joel Little, Broods, Lorde and Swedish singer-songwriter Tove Lo to help make "Conscious," a punchier, beat-driven LP. The 13-track album, which was named for the Nott siblings' alert attitude toward production, brings the band stateside this month. Caleb calls from L.A. before they hit the road.

on opposite sides of the world, and we'd only ever seen each other in other continents, like every six months. It's a song about what if we could be the in same place, would it work then? I mean, it didn't, but that's another story.

Another song.

Yeah, maybe. [Lorde] and us have really different processes, so it was interesting to see how Joel [Little] works with someone else. He works so closely with us, and you assume he works with everyone else the same way he works with you. It was interesting to see them together. She was really easy to work with.

What changed this time around with having that kind of influence and know-how?

A lot of it had to do with me being more involved with the production. The first album, I had no idea what I was doing, so I couldn't actually make anything myself. This time around, I changed a lot, producing beats that Joel would then help make them sound cooler.

Do you think that confidence changed what the album sounded like?

We were more confident in pushing what we want and our ideas. RACHEL RACZKA

Boston real estate stays hot

Demand keeps outpacing supply in a Boston real estate market that's been showing gains on an annual basis for months.

According to the Greater Boston Association of Realtors, this June low mortgage rates, rising home values and a healthy job market kept demand for detached single-family homes on the up-and-up. Sales of those units have been improving on an annual basis for 13 straight months, up to 1,916 this year from 1,870 units sold last year. The previous monthly high was June 2004's 1,888 sales.

Meanwhile, condo sales remained essentially flat, 1,388 to last year's 1,389. That's still the third highest sales total for June in greater Boston; the highest was 2005's 1,546.

The June single-family median price was 4.5 percent higher than it was last June, $585,000 to 2015's $560,000; this was the 21st consecutive month that it's risen on an annual basis. Condo prices were also up, $505,000 to last year's $460,000, an increase of 9.8 percent.

Inventory, on the other hand, continues to drop as the housing stock stays flat and the buyers keep coming anyway. Single-family home inventory dropped 18.5 percent, from 3,698 in June 2015 to 3,015 last month. Condos went from 1,933 to 1,457, a 24.6 percent fall.

FANTASY FB: THE ZERO RB STRATEGY

FANTASY SPORTS

ADAM LEVITAN
alevitan@metro.us

By now, you've likely heard of the drafting strategy known as "zero RB." It involves selecting no running backs through at least the first four rounds of your draft, instead choosing to load up on other positions.

It works because running backs have the highest injury rate and raw talent isn't worth as much as opportunity. Thomas Rawls, DeAngelo Williams, David Johnson, Jeremy Langford and Charcandrick West were among the 2015 runners that came off the wire and helped carry the zero-RB crowd to glory.

Still, we need to go into the draft with a plan for the running back position. Here are some midrounders with upside to target:

Lat pulldowns

Latavius Murray was not very good last year, ranking 33rd among 50 qualifiers in fantasy points per opportunity. But he did receive a whopping 72.8 percent of the Raiders' running back touches and tied for the league lead by handling 81.8 percent of his team's carries inside the 5-yard line. Since then, the Raiders have only added undersized fifth-rounder DeAndre Washington to their backfield. So we can expect another big market share for Murray, this time with free agent pickup LG Kelechi Osemele helping to form one of the league's best offensive lines. He's an ideal fifth-round pick for owners who start their draft with four wide receivers.

Philadelphia freedom

Ryan Mathews has averaged a strong 4.47 yards per carry during his six-year NFL career. He ran circles around DeMarco Murray last season, giving the Eagles enough confidence to dump Murray and only add fifth-rounder Wendell Smallwood in the draft. Mathews will also play in the RB-friendly Doug Pederson/Andy Reid scheme that made Jamaal Charles, Charcandrick West and Spencer Ware fantasy studs in Kansas City. Yet Mathews is consistently available in the fifth or sixth round of fantasy drafts solely because of his checked injury history. It's a risk worth taking, as Mathews' injuries are not of the lingering variety.

Old man river

Frank Gore breaks every aging curve. Now 33 years old, he hasn't missed a game since 2010 and continues to play at a high level. Last year's stats are deceiving, as the entire offense went in the tank with Andrew Luck only playing seven games. This year, Gore will be the unquestioned feature back and goal-line option on a team that projects among the league leaders in points per game. He's a high-floor pick in the seventh round or so.

More midround RBs

- Matt Jones, Redskins — Alfred Morris is gone, giving Jones first crack at the lead back job in a sneaky elite offense.
- Charles Sims, Bucs — Doug Martin only plays on early downs, meaning we can expect a lot of catches again for Sims. He graded out as PFF's No. 1 RB last year.
- Duke Johnson, Browns — New head coach and run-game specialist Hue Jackson will maximize the truly electric skills of Johnson.

Aries Put travel plans into play. Set your itinerary and put together a budget that will allow you to enjoy the most important aspects of your trip. Romance is encouraged.

Taurus Use your voice to bring about positive change. A solution or suggestion you offer will be met with interest. Travel and learning will complement one another.

Gemini Travel will encourage new friendships. Participate in activities that bring out the best in you. Put your needs first and let your actions speak for you.

Cancer Expand a personal pleasure and clear a space at home to motivate you to follow through. Show off your uniqueness and you'll attract someone as special as you.

Leo Don't wait for others do to things for you. Bring about positive changes at home or to you personally and reap the rewards. Love is in the stars.

Virgo Take in a movie or kick back with someone you enjoy spending time with. Share your thoughts and make an offer to someone that will encourage a vacation.

Libra Having a purpose will lead to personal growth. You will gain stability if you use your skills to help others. A positive change with regard to a relationship looks promising.

Scorpio You'll be caught between a rock and a hard place when it comes to satisfying your personal and professional desires. Use your time wisely.

Sagittarius Set your plans according to what's possible. If you take on too much, you will fall short on all counts. Look for truth and facts, not fast talk and persuasive tactics.

Capricorn Do your homework and you'll get exactly what you want. A last-minute alteration will play on your emotions. Stay true to your decision regardless of what others do.

Aquarius Demonstrate exactly what it is you want and expect from others and you will bypass dilly-dallying that accomplishes little. Your ability to adapt will help you.

Pisces Your talents will be recognized but also scrutinized. Be ready to handle anyone who acts out of jealousy. You've worked hard, and you deserve to reap the rewards. EUGENIA LAST
